Compulsory REVISION comments	Indeed, Alzheimer's disease is considered one of the most prevalent diseases in the world, but unfortunately, the budget allocated to developing modern methods for detecting and treating the disease is still below the required level when compared to the budgets allocated to other diseases such as cancers. In this review article, the researcher was able to present the problems related to Alzheimer's disease in terms of the number of drugs discovered to treat the disease, steps required to take an approve from FDA as well as problems arising from insurance companies about the financial cost required for treatment the disease using gene therapy. The writer of this review article has made a respectable effort in clarifying the financial problems that are required to be resolved in order to continue developing the medicines required for the treatment of Alzheimer's, and this will only come by increasing the budget allocated to this disease and the participation of private sector companies to reach this goal.
