

Editor's Comment:

The manuscript has been generally improved according to reviewers' suggestions.

However, there are some questions still unclear, such as:

Is there ethical approval of this study by a research ethics committee? This is one of the concerns raised by the second reviewer. If not, it could be explained why in the text.

There are too many references in the text whose sources are missing in the bibliography, and conversely, many sources in the bibliography that are absent in the text. Actually, one can hardly find any correspondence between the citations in the text and the bibliography.

In my humble opinion, the whole text needs a serious review in terms of consistency between the literature cited and the bibliography at the end. The list of references should be aligned with the requirements of the journal. In addition, language editing of some phrases is also needed.

At this stage, I do not recommend publishing the article before these changes have been made.
