

Editor's Comment:

The manuscript provides informative data upon local practices in exploiting edible frogs from the wild in the locations under survey. Some of the Reviewers remarks have been taken in account by the Authors. Yet, as a whole, this work reports an interesting but simple inquiry (rather than corresponding to what is understood as "original scientific research"):

- without any assumption considered and challenged,
- no real statistical testing despite what is invoked in the method section,
- so that, accordingly, the discussion section is limited only to a mere comparison with a few other local practices, without the result of emphasizing one strategy rather than another.

Indeed, these limitations were already emphasized in part of the comments of the Reviewers.

Therefore, given the interesting informative nature of the manuscript, I recommend that it be accepted for publication in ARJA.
