

Editor's Comment:

I concluded that the authors complied with the reviewers' recommendations and improved the manuscript. Therefore, I consider that the manuscript is apt for publication.

However, I would like to suggest two other points of improvement, if possible. The first one is actually about formatting the scientific name of the species in the title. Even if the whole title is written with capital letters, the scientific name should be written as usual, with only the first letter of the genus in capital letter and using italics (Cola nitida).

In second place, I've noticed that some of the bibliographic references have different formats, especially regarding the position of the publication year.
