PART 1: Review Comments

	Reviewer's comment	Author's comment (if agreed with reviewer, correct the manuscript and highlight that part in the manuscript. It is mandatory that authors should write his/her feedback here)
Compulsory REVISION comments	This study is original and relevant to agriculture. Studies that address the application of microorganisms as biofertilizers have great potential for the development of sustainable agriculture for many of commercial importance. The most used methodology for microbiome analysis is targeted sequencing, also called "16S rRNA sequencing". This is because the 16S ribosomal gene, present in bacteria, has extremely conserved regions and variable regions, which differ at all taxonomic levels, these variable regions are important phylogenetic markers for microbiome studies. I recommend proofreading the English language.
Minor REVISION comments	It presents a very organized and easy to understand methodology.
Optional/General comments	In addition, it has current and well-formatted bibliographic references. However, in line 121 of topic 2.3.2 there is a very old reference from 1969 (named 31), it would be advisable to add a current reference on the same theme.
