Compulsory REVISION comments	<ul style="list-style-type: none">Abstract seems too long. no key words.Sample size is not enough to support the study findings. Though students and teachers have been the respondents in this study, only teachers have been taken as sample size, researcher should define such things. Researcher is able to use cron bach alpha for its reliability that is the interesting part , however, in table 2 it is better to use likert scale to explain the table seems better.Other tools for the contribution of the entrepreneurship education to develop the economic development in public secondary schools can be like requirement of the vocational training and others can be mentioned in the study. In the context of other countries different courses in the secondary level have been launched as an entrepreneurship education like occupational, business and technological education have been the compulsory course in the school education like in Nepal. Only with taking 4 variables in this study can not generalize that the contribution of integration of entrepreneurship education for economic development in public secondary school.
