Minor REVISION comments	<ul style="list-style-type: none">- Similar trend was also observed in the case of- Spirulina is also cultivated and harvested in man-made reservoirs- Many factors are important for the production of spirulina at large scale, of which most important factors are nutrient availability, temperature and light. The filamentous cyanobacteria such as spirulina are found to be most compatible microorganisms for the utilization of waste and wastewaters as they are able to produce large quantity of biomass and their harvesting is also relatively easy because of their structure. Also, these wastes reduce the cost of nutrient medium and act as a source of cheap nutrient medium for cultivation of spirulina. The commercial production of spirulina can be made cost effective by reducing the input cost with cheap and readily available materials without sacrificing the production efficiency.
