Compulsory REVISION comments	<ol style="list-style-type: none">1. The diagnosis of EDS type VII was confirmed by biochemical studies or mutation analysis showing characteristic mutations, in absence of this...the description (of the classic features of ED) could have been more elaborate with special reference to the facial features.2. The possible overlap with other syndromes with reference to this patient could have been better rather being discussed in general, especially other connective tissue disorder or skeletal dysplasia.3. What about the details of mental development?4. Details of genetic consultation?5. Probable diagnosis- is this correct terminology?
Minor REVISION comments	Arterioachalic- should this be used, if so why?
Optional/General comments	With the absence of mutation analysis and possible overlap with other syndromes, the discussion to substantiate and confirm this only case of EDS type VII could have been more elaborate with pictures.
