Compulsory REVISION comments
Minor REVISION comments
Optional/General comments	The authors should be congratulated for the theme chosen, due to the scarcity of publications on this subject and how relevant it is to study and learn about this type of procedure that any public administration should know to adjust its services to the population, increasing its efficiency and operability. . The study has a bibliographic foundation in a high percentage, 80% of the last five years, very recent, which brings relevance and quality to the article, complying with the most demanding international standards, to a very important topic to deal with, and that is not usual in the few publications of this type. It is very important to analyze the dissemination of information as one of the responsibilities of governments towards their citizens. To inform the public of updates related to the functions and services of government offices, such as the prosecutor's office, this study reveals that traditional information dissemination strategies are more popular and effective in getting information to its intended recipients. Despite the emergence of many modern tools to facilitate communication, people still cling to the relevance and importance of traditional tools for communication and information dissemination. Regardless of technological innovations that may be introduced in the future. the role of traditional tools in any context or environment is irreplaceable. The results of the study also pointed to the role that the telecommunications industry plays in the information dissemination activities of the government and society in general. It is very relevant that the study took place in an area of the Philippines, to reflect the problems and needs of remote and minority populations, little considered by researchers,
