Optional/General comments	The manuscript analyzes a case of interest that refers to the application of solid waste compost and Green manure to observe the residual effects in soil nutrient content and plant nutrient uptake in rice. Several components were reviewed such as: Nitrogen, Phosphorus, Potassium, Sulphur. The procedure was developed statistically. Results obtained were very encouraging, with positive results in its composition. One aspect that undoubtedly requires attention will be the study and influence of heavy metals in the soil, an aspect that has been left pending for future research. The work in short is of interest and is an important indicator in the agri-food field. The references on which the study was based is very vast, there are no objections. The manuscript clearly describes the research procedure; its publication is of interest.
