Optional/General comments	The author must be congratulated for the data he provides from his qualitative research methodology that allow us to understand the reasons for the persistent problems of interethnic coexistence in Ethiopia and the identification and detection of conflicts that must be taken into account. It is politically essential to raise awareness of the importance of preserving natural resources, the deprivation of these natural resources and their scarcity will lead to the expansion of conflicts. Another issue that must be taken into account at the governance level is the control of arms trafficking, which undoubtedly harms coexistence and favors the increase of the conflict due to dark and corrupt interests. The author offers very relevant information to understand the situation, maintenance and growth of the problems . So that both social researchers can more specifically investigate the situation and so that social and political agents can reverse the problem and seek ways of coexistence, which guarantee a better life and future for this geographical area so in need of peace, education and social welfare for develop, and not feed arms interests and social involution protected by entrenched traditional problems. In this way, social research entails transfers to society that will have an impact on the quality of life of citizens.
