Optional/General comments	This paper presents a survey of the attitudes of patients with type 2 diabetes in Kisangani, a city in the Democratic Republic of Congo. The survey was properly conducted and the results will be educational about diabetes as a lifestyle-related disease in sub-Saharan African countries, especially as a typical example of one of the lifestyle-related diseases prevalent in developed Western countries. The results show statistics for 100 people, although the exclusions are written. Were there zero exclusions? In developed countries, diabetes management involves a team approach in which nurses, nutritionists, and exercise therapists work in combination to manage cases. It would be desirable to include the location of this study or the current situation in the Democratic Republic of the Congo.
