Will be useful to curriculum developers. The authors should be congratulated; however, I am concerned that the authors fail to mention (or if I missed it failed to make it clear) that the USA does not have a national curriculum. It has 50 (very similar ones) but not like I think in China or here in Brasil, where national direction subsumes the states. Am I led to believe that they looked at the California curriculum vs the Chinese one?
