Compulsory REVISION comments	The manuscript n. Ms_MRJI_67728 entitled "The Bacteriological Quality of Raw cow milk obtained from Herdsmen in Okigwe,Imo State,Nigeria" investigated the bacteriological quality of raw milk in this area. This paper is well organized and written clearly. However, there are important points that require to be clarified. <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. I do not see much novelty of the paper in method and content in view of the simple investigation and standard microbiological procedure. 2. The sampling is not typical and enough as only five samples were collected in five different locations. 5-6 samples were required for a certain location. 3. The aim of this paper is to evaluate the degree of bacterial contamination of raw milk, however, the statistic analysis is missing. The principal component analysis (PCA) was required to conduct for the evaluation. 4. The duplication experiments were required for the variation analysis. For instance, the triplicated experiments for 25 samples, then 75 numbers would be obtained. 5. The discussion part is not appropriate. There are numerous researches about the bacteriological quality of raw milk, but no literatures published within five years were cited in the references list. 6. The author should revise all the format mistakes, e.g. the empty pages, the typesetting, the definition of table.1, and the references, etc. Therefore, my decision is major revision.
