Yes, the manuscript is important to the scientific community. Based on the use of correlation and multiple regression analysis, an approach to establishing the distribution of health problems among gas station workers is revealed. 2. Yes 3. Yes 4. Yes 5. Yes 6. Yes Suggestion: In future research, in my opinion, it would be beneficial to analyze the percentage distribution of health among workers based on age and work experience for both women and men. Establishing a critical point in the distribution of health issues could provide valuable insights. Tasking the percentage distribution by age and tenure will allow you to delineate the influence of these factors and potentially identify any critical periods or dependencies that should be considered in developing strategies for maintaining the health of employees..
Minor REVISION comments 1. Is language/English quality of the article suitable for scholarly communications?	English is suitable for scientific communication.
Optional/General comments	The authors utilized correlation and multiple regression analyses. Including regression equations in the article is highly beneficial, as it allows for a precise determination of the nature and strength of the relationships between the variables under investigation. Providing regression equations in the article would be useful, enabling other researchers or readers to replicate the analysis and verify the results, thus fostering openness and reproducibility in research.
