| Optional/General comments | The text provides an in-depth exploration of the impact of divorce on children's psychological and physiological well-being, addressing the gaps in existing research regarding intervention and prevention programs. It highlights the detrimental effects of divorce on children, covering various aspects such as academic performance, emotional health, and physiological implications. The study proposes the need for further research to investigate effective strategies and comprehensive measures aimed at mitigating the negative consequences of divorce on children, emphasizing the importance of teacher training, parental involvement, and incorporating divorce education into school curricula. Study needs some revisions; <ol style="list-style-type: none"> In the introduction of the study, the basics of the subject should be discussed in more detail. The gap that the study fills in the literature should be detailed. In its current form, it gives the impression of a research paper rather than a review. The first three sections should be combined into introduction. "Answers were found in the literature to answer questions one and two. Little was found in the literature to address questions three and four. However, a program (framework) designed by Niolon et al. (2017) in collaboration with the Center for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), Atlanta, was found to partially address questions three and four. This gap in the literature necessitated this study." is not a comprehensible statement. Please provide details and revise. Provide citations for figures The review article is too short for a review article. All section should be improved and enlarged. The study should include limitations. | |
