Optional/General comments	Role of P Wave Duration and Tissue Doppler Imaging as Predictive Indicators for Paroxysmal Atrial Fibrillation in Hypertensive Patients was studied in this paper. Compared with the NAF group, the paroxysmal AF group had substantially longer atrial electromechanical time, intra-atrial and inter-atrial electromechanical delay. Pmax and TDI combination may be useful in predicting the onset of paroxysmal atrial fibrillation in hypertensive individuals. The findings add valuable information in the diagnosis of cardiac disease and may be published .
