

Editor's Comment:

The reviewed paper has deficiencies in English and is truly difficult to understand, so I suggest the authors refine the expressions a bit to make the text more understandable.

On the other hand, I would like to highlight that of the 35 references to the work, 24 are in Russian, so they are difficult to consult for the vast majority of readers. I would be grateful to the authors that for future publications they take this into account and use references in English, which is the most widely used language for science.
