Compulsory REVISION comments	This manuscript addresses the use of fermented feed on the growth of tilapia. It is a review but is too simple, without in-depth analysis. The first thing to do is define the objectives: as the objectives of the review are not clear, the conclusions do not contribute much to who consults it. The wording of the text needs to be improved; it has several redundant words and sentences. References are not in a uniform format and are not up to date: only 3 of the 18 references correspond to the last 5 years, which undermines the quality and relevance of the review. Therefore, the most important point is that this review be updated.
