| Optional/General comments   | Creativity is a concept and a paradigm that is fully topical and in which many countries try to influence and incorporate into their educational systems on the recommendation of large transnational institutions such as UNESCO and other organizations. In the European Union there is a specific program of motivation and stimulation of the development and implantation of this activity for the development of the populations and to obtain social welfare, overcoming conflicts and for the increase of the economy. plays a crucial role in generating valuable new ideas, tasks and unique talents, which ultimately contribute to the social and cultural dimensions It has been recognized as essential for physical and psychological well-being, optimal human functioning, and technological advances. Educational institutions have the responsibility to ensure the development of students with the necessary skills to enhance creativity and actively promote their development. Bloom's Revised Cognitive Model places creativity as the highest goal of instruction, highlighting the importance of schools prioritizing the promotion and nurturing of children's creative abilities. We must congratulate the authors for the theme, and for the experimental development of the theme with an impeccable methodological design. that will give the magazine a lot of visibility, because there is a massive search for documentation of creative projects. The only thing that I would recommend to the authors is that they make an effort to search the most prestigious databases for the most recent articles of impact that give the article more bibliographic quality, and more recent foundations. However, the bibliography is pertinent and varied. The importance of developing critical thinking and creative problem-solving skills in children now and in the future is critical. Research has shown that creativity can be enhanced through explicit training and this study goes to show that the six thinking hats technique significantly improves innovative competence in participants. |   |
