

Editor's Comment:

There is an effort shown by the authors, so the research is acceptable from the scientific point of view, and I suggest that the authors review the paper from the linguistic point of view because there are some errors in writing scientific names, for example, eigenvalues, writing the first letter as a capital, and also some errors in the commas. However, in general, it is acceptable for publication with some minor corrections, which give the journal scientific strength in the research it publishes.
