Compulsory REVISION comments	Excellent article The study has not been published before. This article is considered to be important as research study, so it pretends to be one of the most recent studies regarding factors involved in perforative peritonitis and mortality. I strongly believe that this article is completely appropriate for being included in the journal of research because it is composed of strict recent findings. The manuscript clearly indicates significant research that has been made by the authors. Well structured in different paragraphs, including introduction, materials, and discussion. On the whole, I consider its excellence. Congratulations.
Minor REVISION comments	The language is clearly understandable, and there is no ambiguity about the results obtained.
