

Editor's Comment:

The research is of scientific and practical interest and the design of the study and report look fairly satisfying.

However, acronyms such as GCV and PCV must be clearly explained from the start, that is to say, here, in the abstract, and the same for the key words. This is mandatory and must imperatively be rectified in the revised version.

Also an important detail: the Authors should check for the editing of Table 3, which from being correct in the original version becomes confused in the revised version for some unknown reason.

As regards the relevant additive suggestions of each of the two Reviewers, I agree with them that both suggestions would contribute to improve the report and the Authors might appreciate the interest of considering these suggestions. Nevertheless, I do not consider this as a necessary condition for the manuscript to be published and it is up to Authors themselves to make the decision in this respect.

Now, whatever this decision may be, I consider that after mandatory corrections first cited above are done the newly revised version of this interesting manuscript will clearly deserves being published in IJECC.
