This allows assessing the relative importance of important predictors of household water usage that have been identified in previous studies. In addition to calculating and conserving the water consumed in the home, this research can also help to solve the future drinking water crisis by analyzing how much wastewater is produced by water purifiers and how much awareness there is for conserving it. There is also an incentive to reuse water, which can alleviate the strain on water sources.) yes Rewrite the abstract. The abstract is a concise overview of the entire research paper, so it is important to include the most important information about the research methodology and results. This will help readers to understand the study and its significance, even if they do not have time to read the full paper. The authors should rewrite the "Finding and Analyzing" section of their paper to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Declare the aim of the section at the beginning. This will help the reader understand the purpose of the section and what to expect. For example, the authors could write: "In this section, we present our findings from the analysis of the data. We aim to identify the key patterns and trends in the data, and to draw conclusions about the research questions." • Declare the aim of the figures and tables before them. This will help the reader understand the purpose of each figure and table, and how they support the findings of the section. For example, the authors could write: "Figure 1 shows the distribution of participants by age group. This figure helps us to understand the demographic makeup of the sample." Yes Yes 1. Please pay attention to accurate grammar and concise wording. 2. Table titles should be placed above the table. 3. There are repetitions in Figure 2 because the phrase "sum of sum of" is redundant. 4.
