

Editor's Comment:

About this article "Farmers Intention Regarding Adoption of Organic Agriculture", In my opinion this is a very superficial study. The analysis of the results is based only on the percentages obtained but there is no basis for discussion; more information is essential to be able to indicate whether farmers would like to have their crops organically. There are no reliable sources of information since they do not cite the references within the text and there is also no in-depth discussion of farmers who may not be in India, but who can provide information on the benefits of this. Therefore, I consider that this article should not be published until these points are considered.
