Minor REVISION comments Is the language/English quality of the article suitable for scholarly communications?
Optional/General comments	REVIEWER COMMENTS: Materials & Methods: The article provides a comprehensive overview of the various channels through which agriculture can contribute to poverty alleviation and rural development. The authors have drawn upon a wide range of literature and case studies to support their arguments. However, the article could have benefited from more detailed descriptions of the methodological approaches used in the reviewed studies, such as data collection, sampling techniques, and analytical frameworks. This would have allowed the reader to better evaluate the quality and rigor of the evidence presented. Results & Discussion: The data presented in the article, such as the impact of agricultural productivity growth on poverty reduction and the distribution of land holdings, appear to be well-controlled and robust. The authors have also provided relevant and current references to support their discussions. However, the discussion could have been strengthened by more in-depth analysis of the contextual factors that influence the effectiveness of the various strategies and approaches discussed, such as the role of institutions, policies, and market dynamics. Additionally, the authors could have provided more critical assessment of the limitations and trade-offs associated with some of the interventions, such as the potential unintended consequences of input subsidies or the challenges in ensuring the sustainability of value chain development initiatives. The article would have also benefited from the inclusion of more statistical analyses, where appropriate, to quantify the magnitude and significance of the relationships between agriculture, poverty reduction, and rural development. Conclusion: The conclusion is generally well-supported by the data and discussions presented in the article. The authors have made a compelling case for the importance of agriculture in addressing poverty and promoting rural development, and have provided a clear set of recommendations for policymakers, practitioners, and researchers. However, the conclusion could have been strengthened by a more nuanced assessment of the contextual factors that may influence the success or failure of the proposed strategies and approaches, as well as a more explicit acknowledgment of the potential limitations and trade-offs inherent in any policy or intervention targeting the agricultural sector. Overall, the article provides a comprehensive and well-researched overview of the role of agriculture in poverty alleviation and rural development. With some additional methodological details, more critical analysis, and a more nuanced consideration of contextual factors, the article could be further strengthened to provide a more robust and actionable framework for addressing these important development challenges.
