Optional/General comments	I have read the article sent to me for review and I would like to make the following notes: <ol style="list-style-type: none">1. The article is purely theoretical and was clear from the title.2. The abstract does not contain anything indicating the application, place of application, and research method.3. Most of the sources were written in the introduction and the introduction was supposed to be the researcher's effort.4. I did not notice any methodology in the research in terms of the problem, objectives, importance, hypothesis, and research method used in the research.5. There is no practical aspect in the research that proves the researcher's hypothesis.6. There are no conclusions or suggestions in the research.7. The research sources are very few and were not included in the text of the research. I hope that my important comments will be taken into consideration, as they are the basics of scientific research suitable for publication in journals with a well-known academic reputation
