Title: The Role of Environmental Management Accounting in Economic Development through Corporate Product and Process Innovation in Indonesia

My editorial decision is to publish as is with minor corrections.

I suggest revised title: "Econometric Study: Testing Environmental Management Accounting on Economic Development in East Java Indonesian"

The article is an impressive research article. The article is well-written, most interesting and important. The authors' main conclusions make good common sense to me.

The latest test results prove that process innovation is also able to strengthen the relationship between the Environmental Management Accounting (EMA) variable and economic development. Innovation is indeed a word that is no longer foreign to our ears, which is a key word for the business world. In this new millennium era, where the sales market has begun to move towards the buyers' market, the role of innovation seems increasingly important and very determining in being able to win the competition (Farida et al., 2022).
