This would enrich the discussion about the great nutritional effects of this cake. "However, they are now known as nutraceuticals." This sentence needs a reference (introduction section).            Authors need to make better connections between the paragraphs. This will increase the reading flow.            "Sweet potatoes are known as "camote" in the local language." It would be interesting to refer to where this local language is.            The terms "significant amounts or moderate amounts" should be avoided if they do not offer the numbers or do not compare to international references such as RDA.            "Carotene and vitamin C both function as potent antioxidants in the body by removing free radicals." This sentence needs a reference (introduction section).            "Salvia hispanica" must be written in italics since these words are not related to the main manuscript language.
Minor REVISION comments 1. Is language/English quality of the article suitable for scholarly communications?            Yes, the paper was well-written and easy to be followed.
Optional/General comments	"The study was carried out at Babasaheb Bhimrao Ambedkar University's Food Science and Technology Laboratory (FSTL)." Please provide the State of this university. (Methods section)            How did it ensure that 65°C would not alter the nutritional content of the sweet potatoes? Please provide some studies that support this method.            Please provide a reference for the Kjeldahl method.            The authors must standardize the citation format; some are in italics, some are in IS: and some are normally written.            Please write "%" or percent.            The discussion was poor; the authors could have added other preparations that have similar
