Even though it involves the use of fossil energy, it is already a significant step forward in preserving nature and contributing greatly to green chemistry and a zero-waste circular economy, albeit partially for now, in the face of climate change. It is a way to sustainably manage winemaking waste to produce extra-neutral alcohol. Vineyards are now becoming carbon sinks. This is a noble contribution with applications in perfumery (not affecting the perception of scents by perfumers) while adhering to standards and adopting meticulous, cutting-edge scientific methods at every stage. All that's missing are the key words This article deserves to be widely circulated
