Optional/General comments	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> (1) The introduction section should clearly state the research objectives, research questions, and the research gap. It should be structured into multiple paragraphs for clarity and depth rather than condensing into one paragraph. (2) The literature review should thoroughly explore the key concepts relevant to the research topic, providing a comprehensive background and context for the study. (3) The methodology section should be divided into three t parts: data source, measurement, and analysis process. The data source part should detail the origins and nature of the data used in the research. The measurement part should explain the metrics and instruments employed to gather and assess data. The analysis process should describe the methods and procedures used to analyze the collected data. (4) The current paper structure does not align with the APA format for research papers.
