

Editor's Comment:

I have seen all the correspondence and the comments and other related information on the manuscript. Although one of the reviewers asked initially for a major revision, the authors failed to do so. Just adding a few lines does not amount to major revision, looking at the problems associated with the manuscript. My point of objection is mainly related to the data collection and the interpretation. Only taking data for 5 consecutive days, how can they conclude their findings? Even the months during which this data was collected is not mentioned. Whether it was festival time or school/college/public holidays. SO the authors must be asked to repeat their data collection at least 4 times during the year with different seasonal times. Otherwise this study will not be useful for the readers and it will not serve the purpose. Even literature surveys are not complete and relevant studies are not included.

My opinion: Major revision with justified data collection.
