The author has opened new areas of research in a location which is not studied extensively- East Africa. The study is of crucial importance because it deals with various types of migration like refugee flows, internally displaced persons etc. By focusing on issues like interactions, conflicts, economic relationships, consumer behaviour and skill development, the author adds to the richness of the literature on migration in East Africa. His work is different because it is able to connect the socio-economic conditions in both their places of origin and destination by taking the case study Burundi with limited education that migrate to Kibondo. 2.Yes. If the author has to include all the issues mentioned, then the title is appropriate. 3. Abstract is comprehensive in lot of respects. Considering the wide spectrum being studies abstract is fine. 4. Sub section and structure are logically connected. 5. Research methodology is robust and so the work is scientific. 6. Most of the references were of recent origin. The work is impressive because of the extensive references given on the topics investigated upon. This gendered migration pattern aligns with findings from similar contexts, underscoring the need for gender-sensitive migration policies and support systems" Author may give references regarding findings from similar studies on the above aspect.
