

Editor's Comment:

I have read reviewers' remarks and both noticed that there were few recent references used (references of the last let's say 5-8 years), while there are references of a century old!!!

Therefore I urge the authors to seek more references of the last 5-10 years in order to have a balance between old and new ones.

Furthermore, one reviewer noticed that there should be a subheading on the control of the enemy by chemical, biological and/or biotechnological tools and the authors replied that they are interested in only biological control. Although this is acceptable from their side, they should have in mind that they did a review, and within this review everything should be included. In case they want to show only the biological means of control, then the title should be accordingly changed. If they decide to keep the title as is now, they should then write also chemical ways and any other way to control the enemy.

So for the time being the manuscript can not be accepted for publication, as minor revision is needed.
