TITLE

Is the pandemic problem still interesting?

ABSTRACT

The level of determinants of learning strategies and readiness for blended learning on student satisfaction needs to be explained quantitatively.

INTRODUCTION

The issue of COVID-19 is no longer enjoyable. The author needs to consider that because it is optional for future studies. It is best to ensure that blended learning will be needed forever, even though it is no longer during the COVID-19 pandemic, because digital learning tends to choose the blended learning model rather than pure online learning or face-to-face learning only.

In the introduction, English teachers' ability to implement blended learning was not presented, even though this is the main factor in the success of this learning.

Research Instrument

Research instruments need to be detailed, including those other researchers developed and those that were the result of independent development by the researcher.
