Optional/General comments	This manuscript entitled "Microbial succession and effect of fermentation on the proximate composition of sweet potato tubers, leaves and vines" investigates the possibility of using fermented sweet potato (tubers, leaves, and vines) as a substitute for conventional poultry feed ingredients like maize and soybean meal. The focus on fermentation and its impact on the nutritional value for poultry is commendable. However, the manuscript having some minor corrections <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Change the grammatical errors. For e.g. The proximate, an increase 2. Change the typographical errors. For e.g. Arich (a rich). 3. Mention the table 1 in paragraph. 4. Expand the discussion section to elaborate on the implications of the findings. Discuss how the changes in nutrient profile affect the suitability of fermented sweet potato for poultry. Address any limitations of this approach. 5. In table 1, mention the abbreviated words below the table. For e.g. APC-Aerobic plate count
