Sacc.] has been reported to affect most of the cruciferous crops throughout the world and is one among the important diseases of rapeseed-mustard with no proven source of transferable resistance in any of the hosts. The pathogen is greatly influenced by weather as the highest disease incidence is reported in wet seasons and in areas with relatively high rainfall. A. brassicae can affect host species at all stages of growth, including seed. Symptoms of the disease are characterized by formation of spots on leaves, stem and siliqua. This blight also reduces seed size and impairs seed color and oil content. Yes No Yes Yes References are old, it is better to use new references.
