

Editor's Comment:

In this work, the author raises a very necessary and interesting question about the diagnosis of patients with various symptoms and signs in order to exclude infections or complications of follicular lymphoma, since etiological factors very often make it difficult to make a preliminary diagnosis. I would advise you to call it not "ORIGINAL RESEARCH PAPER" but "research review article". The same is recommended by one of the reviewers, and I think one should agree with him. The author also listened to the comments of the second reviewer and added the recommended publications to the text. In addition, "Keywords" should be placed after "Abstract".

I think that this manuscript can be published and it will help doctors diagnose this disease.
