1. There is data slicing problem as Authors mentioned 'The plagiarism score may be high because this work is part of a larger project which some parts have previously been published.	The entire project is too large and would be ambiguous to be published as one article. There were over thirty parameters analysed and others measured and calculated. The plagiarism is majorly on the materials and methods, which is almost the same for the project (although the parameters analysed and methods of estimation differ in the different articles). However, the introduction, results and discussion are COMPLETELY DIFFERENT for each article and the once for this particular article have not been published in any journal, not even as abstract.
