Compulsory REVISION comments
Minor REVISION comments	In general, this manuscript has fulfilled the elements of writing scientific principles. The flow of writing is very systematic and has an empirical contribution that becomes a benchmark for coastal tourism development in Sri Lanka. The author attempts to offer an idea using a scientific approach (quantitative-PSL SEM) to validate the research question and examine the relationship between community perception (pos & neg) and the intention to support tourism development. I suggest the author also put forward an idea as a novelty of this research. Rise an opinion based on the research gap as consideration to the theoretical contribution of tourism studies. In addition, references used as much as possible are limited to the last five years.
Optional/General comments
