Compulsory REVISION comments	I am very glad to review and assess this fascinating manuscript: - "The Development of Private Digital Currency in China and Its Enlightenment to the Promotion of Legal Digital Currency". This paper analyzes the earlier development of private digital currency, and explores the deficiencies in the development of private digital currency in China, in order to provide reference and reference for the development of legal digital currency in China. This paper first expounds the concept and classification of digital currency, then analyzes the current situation of the supervision of private digital currency in China and other countries around the world, points out the shortcomings of China's response to the risk of private digital currency, and finally puts forward the enlightenment and suggestions for the issuance of legal digital currency in China. This study also provides some problems of private digital currency, such as unclear legal attributes and tax policies, non-standard trading platforms, lack of consumer protection, and weak international cooperation. However, the manuscript needs a minor attention for language. For instance, many times, author(s) has/have mentioned "in our country" or "our country" etc. in the text, Moreover, many sentence begin with "because". This minor issue may erode the soundness of the paper. However, such issues can be taken care at the time of proofreading. Apart from this, the quality and organization of the article are satisfactory. The article is also informative. Therefore, the manuscript can be accepted for publication as it is.
