Compulsory REVISION comments	The manuscript is not written as a research paper. There are a lot of mistakes, unclear formulations. It is not clear, if the paper is written directly with regard to online teaching, on line teaching is mentioned for example on page 2, or as a feedback of regular teaching and learning activities. It is necessary to correct sentences such as ..learning method is a method..., ..influence to guide and guide....qualitative data collection techniques through interviews and observations – is this a heading? The teacher is one who guides and regulates the learning process because the teacher supervises.... Creative approach, that's why we must approach.... Figure 1 is illegible Methodology – where are the outcomes of the analysis made by the software Atlas.ti? The discussion part – formulation of outcomes – why such a great number of literature feedback is used? Poor language Only 4 research respondents? This is not a research, only a case study.
Minor REVISION comments	Unify – generation Z or generation z Why must be learning a fun? Learning and teaching is a hard work, we need to motivate the learners, activate them but it is not a comedy. One chapter is not written in English.
Optional/General comments	I recommend rewrite the paper. I am missing - mention about the last generation – the gen alfa born 2010 and later. These kids are now entering secondary schools – how they differ from gen Z? They should be in the centre of our interest.
