Compulsory REVISION comments	It is an interesting study. It should be defined if the diet of patients was maintained steady throughout the study period. Also at least the first day carries the results of diet and water intake from the previous period. The authors should determine why they have selected such a small study population and why they have decided to move from low to high volume water intake in every patient
Minor REVISION comments	The association between constipation and bowel Ca is possibly secondary Thus as the above mentioned report is adding nothing either to the introduction or the discussion it could be eliminated. There are minor dictation errors like excess calium hypercalcemia or the word feces
