Compulsory REVISION comments	The principles of sustainability are based on the traditional knowledge and wisdom passed from generation to generation. The main goals of these principles are to protect and conserve local or even global resources. This is the most important factor in order to ensure the durability of the local community. The balance between traditional knowledge and local resources is the most influential factor which ensures the continuity of humanity. The aim of the current review is welcome in order to show the importance and deep implication of traditional knowledge in the current social and cultural issues. The methodology of investigation is proper using a large database and numerous previous studies. Also, the database included an evolution of international concerns regarding these issues.
