Compulsory REVISION comments	The authors constructed a well-designed comparative study aiming to investigation the IOP measurement in POAG patients using Corvis-ST. Some details need to be further improved. 1. The language needs to be polished, especially spacing usage. 2. The Discussion section was filled with previous studies' results. The authors found that Corvis-ST had statistically significant higher readings than Goldmann, however, authors missed the chance to further explain this result. The Discussion section should be enriched.
