Compulsory REVISION comments	I have read the paper with great curiosity and found it very interesting. I appreciate your attempt on understanding KAP in Jharkhand through online survey. After reading the paper, I have noted the following comments/observations that you may consider to improve the manuscript. <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Although the author(s) put a commendable effort, the paper requires some language edits. The paper does not read well in many places and it should not be accepted in its current form. I suggest the author(s) get the manuscript edited by someone who excels in English language for this purpose. 2. The introduction section looks a bit less elaborated. Authors may consider using the papers from Lancet series and other quality journals. 3. The methodology and results section needs some improvement on what and how the research depicts the KAP in the study area. Less graphs and further inferential statistics may help improve the manuscript. 4. The conclusion section should be revised explaining the summary and utility of the research aligning it to the policy intervention suggestions.
