Compulsory REVISION comments
Minor REVISION comments	The submitted review manuscript summarizes the current gaps in our knowledge of the potential properties of the generation of omega-3 oils from marine habitats, which has a number of advantages. Also, the documents provide a perspective on the core characteristics of good research. Further, the researchers had payed attention to detailed attention to reporting such marine thraustochytrids studies. Concequently, It has been represented an important work summarizing such as review and have been supported by a founded evaluations analysis such the latest significance of microalgae biotechnology. The latest metrics based on biological properties of microbial oils rich in omega-3s. Therefore, the submitted review manuscript is sound and the results of related determinations are well discussed. After minor revision of the manuscript language for clear style, I suggest accepting it. <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1- The MS can be accepting for publication in my mind after a native English colleague for the grammatical, spellings and written problems has checked the manuscript. 2- The all of abbreviations in the article as EPA... should be written in open form in the first publication then should be use only abbreviation.
