Compulsory REVISION comments	Chronic kidney disease is a major public health problem worldwide, and its main consequences include loss of renal function leading to end-stage renal disease, increased risk of cardiovascular disease, significant increase in morbidity and mortality, and a decrease in health-related quality of life. The basic aim of the study is to analyze the oxidative stress and total antioxidant capacity as a biomarker of cardiovascular risk in those children who are on regular hemodialysis, The data were collected from 50 dialysis patients. The mean age of this study is 15years. Author collected all patient demographics.
Minor REVISION comments	It is concluded that HD patients, the clinical and prognostic significance of oxidative status associated with cardiovascular risk factors is very different from the general population.
Optional/General comments	The author has done a very useful work, which is a great medical importance and can be published in a medical journal.
