Compulsory REVISION comments	In spite of larger efforts worldwide though few advances have made in the field of cancer, the definitive cure is still far from the reach. The existing treatment of cancer comes with lot of side effects. So, research on cancer needs to be taken forward by searching many more different ways of treatment. The current study has potential to establish the usefulness of natural sources such as mangroves. The study has revealed six compounds have the potential to be used as drug. The materials and methods used in this study are standard. The results were expressed by following proper study protocol and observations. Molecular docking established the results based on energy binding energy. The analysis and visualization follow the potential conclusion.
